You can't teach an old dog new tricks?

Have I ever told you how I taught my grandmother to use the computer? Here it goes. A few years ago, when I 1. _ about twelve, my grandmother got a present from my father - a brand new PC. At first, she was delighted because her friends had told her lots of stories about how useful computers were, but later she realised she had no idea how computers worked and she needed someone to teach her. I had been chosen by her to be her tutor as I had always been her favourite 2. _ My grandmother is an intelligent person, but technology is definitely not her 3. _ of tea. Our first lesson was a disaster. She could not understand what I was 4. _ to her. When I told her to 5. _ the mouse, she really thought I was talking about some animal. It took me some time to explain to her how to use the keyboard and what the icons on the 6. _ referred to. The worst thing was the fact that she was afraid to touch anything or write something, but I explained to her that once something had 7. _ written, it could easily be edited or deleted. Now, after all these years, she is running her own blog "Granny's way" where she gives 8. _ to elderly people on how to use the Internet, how to 9. _ shopping online and even how to avoid scams and phishing. I am so proud of her, even my father admitted she knows much more about the Internet than he 10. _ Good job Grandma :)
